HISTORY of BURNABY AND VICINITY

Being an outline of that development which has kept pace with the growth of New Westminster from the earliest times of that city's development, and is inseparably interwoven with it, and with the earliest inroads into the primeval forest which stretched continuously from Prospect Point to Mary Hill which form but a part of that development which had a commencement twenty-five years before Vancouver, now Canada's third City, was born, the fascinating story of which is also depicted in this Bayeux Tapestry of the West, when it is fully depicted.

By George Green, pioneer resident of Burnaby, and an ex-Councillor, Charter Member of the British Columbia Historical Association, Vancouver Branch, and an Executive Member.
